What's new in A Little To The Left:

... Well first things first, you're where you ought to be. If you still got friends in here, I'm pleased to be able to feed him back to the multiverse. I'm saying this because, well, he was a good friend of mine. I still miss you, Jebuz. You're still the nastiest machete in the whole multiverse, the deepest line of ketchup, and the best at dipping donuts into egg yolks. I'm not going to lie, there's always gonna be a place in my heart reserved for you. You would've crunched up more of those crazy enchiladas, and we would've slept together for a week straight after that and moved to the caves of Mount Horrors in hopes of making love rainbows. That's the way we'd do it, Jebuz. The whole multiverse would know that. If you've been put back here because of one last dramatic scene between two of your friends, I want you to know that was the last of the drama. This is a nice, quiet place. And if you want to keep ending threads, you can always just go create one. The saga about impossibly spider-like people of the future getting duped into humanspace, because an enlightened dopey hero like you obviously wouldn't fall for that nonsense, is over. So if you're thinking of creating some Luke/Leia/Han stuff, stop. It just won't work out for you. As far as we're concerned, it's all over, and nobody had a nice happy romantic ending that we ever saw a single picture of. There's no hope for you. I've typed this post out at random, so there's no coherent order for my theories at all. I'm just going to list them out alphabetically, because I don't think it matters very much, really. If the important part is this, there's no need to have all these theories in order. Basically, I just think that Cade Yeager's actions were hugely misguided. To be a good scientist, it's impossible not to have contradictions to more or less everything. And yes, he did say he felt pretty bad for saving the human race, but
