What's new:

Okay, I'm full of emotion over here -- apologies if you don't like waterworks -- but this is just too cool for words! I got my hands on the official game soundtrack the other day and... damn. I don't know if I was expecting this, but it certainly exceeded expectations. You see, I was interested in music/soundtracks of these types of games because I don't know anything about music, and certainly not how it's turned into anime/cartoon soundtracks in the last couple decades. So I had to rely on abstract artistic images and descriptions to understand what I was hearing, and I was totally struck by the quality. I was also surprised to learn that most soundtracks of games made since the late 90s aren't available as "official" soundtracks; the most I've heard of before then (aside from stuff like ZZT, Blaster's Universe, etc.) is the varied music in the Sonic games. And it's not just rhythm/driving songs; I got chills at one point listening to Sonic Adventure's wonderful "Trial by Fire." (Here's the link: I'm beyond happy to see that videogame music is heading in this direction. Here's the link to the official soundtrack, if you don't mind (the purchase link looks suspect to me): And here's a link to the featured track that's attached to Gamewisp's explanation of the game: Now, I'm not going to go into it in detail, because I want to hear your thoughts about it first. All I know is that I have never heard anything like it in any videogame, ever. I find it so beautiful

Swim along the ducks, hop with the frogs, and scurry with the squirrels.The International Monetary Fund has downgraded South Korea's economic growth forecast for this year to a range of 1.3 percent to 2.6 percent, citing the country's weak external demand and domestic financial market conditions. The IMF raised South Korea's growth forecast for 2019 from the 1.8 percent expected in July, after it raised global growth and investment forecasts in its April annual report. But the IMF said it had reverted to its previous view on the basis of updated projections for South Korea's trade and investment data. The IMF's new forecast for the country's growth this year fell short of South Korea's government target to achieve an annual average growth rate of 2.0 percent. The IMF's latest forecast released on Friday is for South Korea to experience growth of 1.3 percent to 2.6 percent this year. "
