You can use these filters to manipulate the Photoshop image by using values and tools for luminance and tonal manipulation, which is the concept of getting closer to black and white. You can use the luminance tools to adjust the brightness and darkness of the photo. You can also use the tonal tools for giving a highlight or shadow image. On the other hand, in Photoshop, inputting values and adjusting color, is done through a color curve. Here we will discuss how to use Cycle values and luminance. If you want to modify the brightness or darkness of the photo and change the color of the image you can use the cycle values, including Cycle pixel values, Cycle luminance values, and Cycle thumbtack colors. Here we will introduce how to use the Cycle values and luminance. If the luminance and tonality of the image is fine, it is possible to apply the cycle pixel values. This is a tool to apply a small number. For example, when you modify a picture slightly, you can use this tool to make a difference. It may be an adjustment between a clear tone and a middle tone, or a subtle change between a light tone and a mid tone. The default setting of the Cycle pixels values is a value of 0%. If you modify the cycle pixels values to change the brightness or darkness of the image, the images are higher than the default setting, and you need to input a higher numbers. However, the value of 100% exceeds the image in the blue-yellow tone. You can change the color of the image by using the time. When the default setting is modified and move the slider, you can modify the color of the image. If you adjust, you will not only move the color but also letting the color change.
